Reading with a purpose

Original simulated course handout. Session: 2026-11-17.
Task: turn this handout into notes you can revise.

Learning goals

- Distinguish an observation from an interpretation.
- Keep a source reference beside an important quotation.
- Write one question to revisit after class.

A short reading routine

Before reading, write down the question you want to answer.
Read one section, pause, and describe its main idea in your own words.

Keep a quotation separate from your interpretation. A useful note should make it clear which words came from the original source.

Details to keep unchanged

Example allowance: 125.00 USD. Adjustment: -5.00 USD.

Exercise time: 15 minutes. Review date: 2026-11-20.

Practice and review

1. Choose one paragraph from a text you are allowed to use.
2. Write a summary, then compare it with the source.
3. Keep one question for the next reading session.

A printed split word

This sample prints a compound word across two lines: careful note-taking keeps the source distinct from your own interpretation.

An intentional three-line address

Example Learning Room
24 Sample Street
Example City, CA 00000

Fictional address for testing line breaks; not a real venue.

Before saving your notes

Check the outline, keep the exercise instructions, and verify the amounts and dates. Remove repeated handout labels if they distract.

A converted handout is not an automatically generated study summary.
